BASIC PRINCIPLES OF SHELTER

- 1) Porosity Shelter should slow the wind not stop it altogether.
Very dense belts such as bamboo dump the wind on the lee side.
- 2) Height Preferably as tall as the site allows. Shorter to the north of buildings, sheds, tracks and farm crossings or similar sites to avoid too much shading.
Deciduous trees can provide excellent shelter and shade in late spring, summer and autumn and let the light through in the winter.
- 3) Continuity Make belts as continuous as possible (gateway wide gaps are okay) to avoid wind accelerating through the gaps and around the ends of the rows.
- 4) Spacing Formal trimmed hedges 0.3 – 1m high 4 - 6 plants per metre
1m – 2.5m 3 plants per metre
Farm or horticultural shelter 1 plant per metre
Timber belts – single row 1 plant per 2 – 3 metres = 333 – 500 per km.
– double row 2m x 2m or 2.5m x 2.5m = 800 – 1000 per km.
